

Chapter 2

The Age Discrimination Act

Contents

2.1	Introduction to the ADA	11
2.1.1	Background	11
2.1.2	Structure of the ADA	12
2.1.3	Application of the ADA	12
2.1.4	Offences	13
2.2	Age Discrimination Defined	14
2.2.1	'Age' Defined	14
2.2.2	Direct Discrimination	14
2.2.3	Indirect Discrimination	15
2.2.4	The 'Dominant Reason' Test	16
2.2.5	Age Discrimination and Disability Discrimination	16
2.2.6	Discrimination against a relative or associate on the basis of age	17
2.3	Proscribed areas of Age Discrimination	17
2.3.1	Discrimination in employment and occupation	18
	(a) Scope of the prohibition	18
	(b) 'Inherent requirements' exemption	19
2.3.2	Discrimination in areas of public life other than employment	20
	(a) Access to goods, services and facilities	20
	(b) Education	20
	(c) Accommodation	20
	(d) Access to premises	21
	(e) Land	21
	(f) Requests for information on which unlawful age discrimination might be based	21
	(g) Administration of Commonwealth laws and programs	21
2.4	Ancillary Liability	22

Federal Discrimination Law 2005

2.5	General exemptions under the ADA	22
2.5.1	'Positive discrimination'	22
2.5.2	Exemption for youth wages	24
2.5.3	Exemption relating to superannuation, insurance and credit	24
2.5.4	Exemption for charities, religious and voluntary bodies	25
2.5.5	Exemption in relation to health	26
2.5.6	Exemption relating to direct compliance with laws, orders of courts including taxation legislation and social security legislation	27
2.5.7	Exemption in relation to migration and citizenship	28

Chapter 2

The Age Discrimination Act

The ADA commenced operation on 22 June 2004. At the date of publication there has been no decided case of unlawful age discrimination under the ADA. This chapter sets out the background to the legislation and its significant features as well as highlighting some similarities and differences with other federal unlawful discrimination laws that may be relevant to its interpretation and application.¹

2.1 Introduction to the ADA

2.1.1 Background

The ADA is intended to act as a catalyst for attitudinal change, as well as addressing individual cases of age discrimination. The stated objects of the ADA are to, amongst other things, raise community awareness that people of all ages have the same fundamental rights and equality before the law, and eliminate discrimination on the basis of age as far as is possible in the areas of public life specified in the Act.²

Another object of the ADA is to 'respond to demographic change and Australia's ageing population by removing barriers to older people participating in society, particularly in the workforce, and changing negative stereotypes about older people'.³ The Revised Explanatory Memorandum to the ADA (the Explanatory Memorandum) comments that:

The proposed new age discrimination Bill will be an integral part of a wide range of key Government policy priorities to respond to the ageing workforce and population, and the important social and economic contribution that older and younger Australians make to the community.

1 Note that this Chapter aims only to provide a summary of some of the significant provisions of the ADA. As with the other Chapters in this publication, readers should not rely on it as being a comprehensive list of all aspects of the ADA and should refer to the ADA directly.

2 Section 3.

3 Section 3(e).

Federal Discrimination Law 2005

...

Age discrimination is clearly a problem for both younger and older Australians. In relation to older Australians, in particular, many recent reports have emphasised the negative consequences of age discrimination on the wellbeing of older Australians and the broader consequences for the community. There is also evidence that the ageing of Australia's population will lead to an increase in the problem of age discrimination if Government action is not taken to address this issue. Government action is needed to address the generally unfounded negative stereotypes that employers and policy makers may have about both younger and older Australians, which limit their contribution to the community and the economy.⁴

...

Given the ageing of Australia's population, the promotion of a mature age workforces is a priority for the Government.⁵

It can be noted, however, that the ADA does not just prohibit discrimination against older Australians on the basis of age. The ADA will, in general, also protect young people from discrimination on the basis of their age.

The Age Discrimination (Consequential Amendments) Act 2004 (Cth) ('Consequential Amendments Act') was enacted along with the ADA. The Consequential Amendments Act provides a number of amendments to the ADA and as well as consequential amendments to the Workplace Relations Act 1996 (Cth) and the HREOC Act.

2.1.2 Structure of the ADA

The general scheme and structure of the ADA is similar to that of the DDA and SDA. The Act sets out definitions of direct and indirect age discrimination and then sets out the areas of public life in which such discrimination is unlawful.

2.1.3 Application of the ADA

The ADA applies throughout Australia, including all States and Territories and external Territories of Australia.⁶ The prohibition on discrimination also applies in relation to discriminatory acts occurring in Australia but which also involve people, things or events outside Australia.⁷ The ADA also applies, to the extent constitutionally permissible:

- to discrimination against Commonwealth employees and persons seeking to become a Commonwealth employee;⁸
- to qualifying bodies operating under Commonwealth laws;⁹

4 Revised Explanatory Memorandum, Age Discrimination Bill 2003 (Cth), 5.

5 Ibid 10.

6 Sections 9(2), 10(5).

7 Section 9(3).

8 Section 10(3).

9 Section 10(4).

- to acts done under Commonwealth or Territory (excluding ACT and NT) laws by Commonwealth or Territory (excluding ACT and NT) governments, administrators or public bodies;¹⁰
- in relation to Australia's international obligations under ILO 111, the ICCPR, the CRC and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights,¹¹ as well as other matters in respect of which the Commonwealth has power to legislate under s 51(xxix) of the Constitution; ¹²
- discrimination by corporations (including foreign corporations within the meaning of s 51(xx) of the Constitution); ¹³
- discrimination in the course of, or in relation to, banking (other than State banking not extending beyond the limits of the State concerned, within the meaning of s 51(xiii) of the Constitution); ¹⁴
- discrimination in the course of, or in relation to, insurance (other than State insurance not extending beyond the limits of the State concerned, within the meaning of s 51(xiv) of the Constitution); ¹⁵ and
- discrimination in international or inter-state trade and commerce.¹⁶

The ADA is intended to bind the executive governments of the Commonwealth and each of the States (including the ACT and NT) and of Norfolk Island and the Administrators of the Territories.¹⁷

The ADA does not purport to displace or limit the operation of State and Territory laws capable of operating concurrently with the ADA.¹⁸ It deals with any potential inconsistency between federal and State/Territory laws by providing that where complainants have a choice as to jurisdiction they are required to elect whether to make their complaint under federal or State/Territory legislation.¹⁹

2.1.4 Offences

While the ADA makes age discrimination unlawful in certain circumstances, it is not, per se, an offence to discriminate on the basis of age.²⁰ The ADA does, however, create specific offences:

10 Section 10(6).

11 Opened for signature 16 December 1966, 993 UNTS 3 (entered into force 3 January 1976).

12 Section 10(7).

13 Section 10(8), (9).

14 Section 10(10)(a).

15 Section 10(10)(b).

16 Section 10(11).

17 Section 13.

18 Section 12(3).

19 Section 12(5).

20 Section 49.

Federal Discrimination Law 2005

- it is an offence to publish or display an advertisement (or cause or permit its publication or display) which indicates an intention to unlawfully discriminate on the basis of age;²¹
- it is an offence ('victimisation') to intentionally cause detriment to a person because that person has made a complaint of discrimination or has taken part in discrimination proceedings;²² and
- it is an offence to fail to disclose the source of actuarial or statistical data when required to do by the President of HREOC under s 54(2) of the ADA.²³

Conduct constituting either of the first two of these offences falls within the definition of 'unlawful discrimination' in s 3 of the HREOC Act. Accordingly, a complaint in relation to such conduct can be made to HREOC.

2.2 Age Discrimination Defined

2.2.1 'Age' Defined

'Age' is defined in s 5 of the ADA as including 'age group'. The ADA provides the following by way of example: 'The reference in subsection 26(3) to students above a particular age includes a reference to students above a particular age group'. The definition of age does not extend to cover the age which might be imputed to a person,²⁴ although the definition of direct age discrimination includes less favourable treatment because of 'a characteristic that is generally imputed to persons of the age of the aggrieved person'.²⁵

2.2.2 Direct Discrimination

The definition of direct discrimination is contained in s 14 of the ADA as follows:

14 Discrimination on the ground of age – direct discrimination

For the purposes of this Act, a person (the discriminator) discriminates against another person (the aggrieved person) on the ground of age of the aggrieved person if:

- (a) the discriminator treats or proposes to treat the aggrieved person less favourably than, in circumstances that are the same or not materially different, the discriminator treats or would treat a person of a different age; and
- (b) the discriminator does so because of:
 - (i) the age of the aggrieved person; or

21 Section 50. Similar provisions are contained in the RDA (s 16), the SDA (s 86) and the DDA (s 44).

22 Section 51. Victimisation is also made an offence under the RDA (s 27(2)), the SDA (s 94) and the DDA (s 42).

23 Section 52. Similar provisions exist in the SDA (s 87) and the DDA (s 107).

24 This can be contrasted with the definition of disability under s 4 of the DDA.

25 Section 14.

- (ii) a characteristic that appertains generally to persons of the age of the aggrieved person; or
- (iii) a characteristic that is generally imputed to persons of the age of the aggrieved person.

The extension of the definition of direct discrimination to include less favourable treatment because of 'a characteristic that appertains generally' to persons of that age or 'a characteristic that is generally imputed' to persons of that age addresses the stereotyping of a particular group or persons on the basis of actual or implied distinguishing or idiosyncratic traits.²⁶ However it is not necessary to establish that the identified characteristic exists in every case: it is only necessary to establish that it generally exists or operates.²⁷

2.2.3 Indirect Discrimination

Section 15 of the ADA defines indirect discrimination as follows:

15 Discrimination on the ground of age – indirect discrimination

- (1) For the purposes of this Act, a person (the discriminator) discriminates against another person (the aggrieved person) on the ground of age of the aggrieved person if:
 - (a) the discriminator imposes, or proposes to impose, a condition, requirement or practice; and
 - (b) the condition, requirement or practice is not reasonable in the circumstances; and
 - (c) the condition, requirement or practice has, or is likely to have, the effect of disadvantaging persons of the same age as the aggrieved person.
- (2) For the purposes of paragraph 1(b), the burden of proving that the condition, requirement or practice is reasonable in the circumstances lies on the discriminator.

Section 15 is similar in substance to the indirect discrimination provisions in the SDA.

However, unlike s 7B(2) of the SDA, the ADA does not contain any reference to the factors to be taken into account when determining whether a condition, requirement or practice is reasonable in the circumstances.²⁸ 'Reasonableness' in the context of indirect discrimination has been the subject of significant judicial consideration in DDA cases²⁹ and this is likely to be relevant in interpreting and applying s 15 of the ADA.

26 See for instance, Commonwealth v Human Rights & Equal Opportunity Commission (1993) 46 FCR 191, 207 (Wilcox J), in the context of the SDA.

27 Ibid.

28 Section 7B of the SDA provides that these matters include, (a) the nature and extent of the disadvantage resulting from the imposition, or proposed imposition, of the condition, requirement or practice; (b) the feasibility of overcoming or mitigating the disadvantage; and (c) whether the disadvantage is proportionate to the result sought by the person who imposes, or proposes to impose, the condition, requirement or practice.

29 See, for example, Clarke v Catholic Education Office (2003) 202 ALR 340, 353-360 [50]-[82]; Catholic Education Office v Clarke [2004] FCAFC 197, [115]. See further 5.2.3(d).

2.2.4 The 'Dominant Reason' Test

The ADA includes a dominant reason test in determining whether or not an act has been done 'because of' the age of a person. Section 16 provides:

16 Act done because of age and for other reason

If an act is done for 2 or more reasons, then, for the purposes of this Act, the act is taken to be done for the reason of the age of a person only if:

- (a) one of the reasons is the age of the person; and
- (b) that reason is the dominant reason for the doing of the act.

The introduction of a dominant reason test represents a departure from the position in other federal unlawful discrimination laws. Under the SDA,³⁰ RDA³¹ and DDA,³² if an act is done for two or more reasons and a discriminatory ground is one of those reasons, then the act is done for the discriminatory reason, whether or not it was the dominant or substantial reason for doing the act. This means that to substantiate a complaint, a person only needs to show that a ground of discrimination, for example their race, sex or disability, was a reason for the less favourable treatment they received.

Practical difficulties in applying a 'dominant reason' test, especially when a court is faced with dual purposes, have been noted in cases concerning legal professional privilege.³³ The 'dominant reason' test was also a feature of the RDA until 1990 when it was removed in light of concerns about its practical application.³⁴

2.2.5 Age Discrimination and Disability Discrimination

The ADA provides that a reference to discrimination against a person on the ground of the person's age is taken not to include a reference to discrimination against a person on the ground of a disability of the person (within the meaning of the DDA).³⁵

30 See s 8 of the SDA.

31 See s 18 of the RDA.

32 See s 10 of the DDA.

33 See, for example, Esso Australian Resources Ltd v Commissioner of Taxation (1999) 201 CLR 49; Spanon v Apand (1996) 68 FCR 322. HREOC's concerns about the application of a 'dominant reason' test, amongst other things, were raised in its submissions to the Senate Legal and Constitutional Committee on the Age Discrimination Bill 2003: see www.humanrights.gov.au/legal/submissions/age_discrimination.html at 1 March 2005.

34 See the then President of HREOC, Sir Ronald Wilson's adverse comments concerning the dominant purpose test in the RDA in Ardeshirian v Robe River Iron Associates (1990) EOC 92-299. In that case, President Wilson stated that:

The application of the [dominant reason test] presents considerable difficulty in a case such as this, requiring an evaluation to be made of the respective weight of the two reasons in contributing to the decision.

For another example of the application of the 'dominant purpose' test as it then was in the RDA see Surti v State of Queensland [1993] HREOCA 3 (22 February 1993).

35 Section 6.

The Explanatory Memorandum to the ADA states that this provision deals with the situation where there is an overlap between the operation of this Act and the DDA. For example, an overlap could occur where a person has a disability that is or could be related to their age (such as impaired hearing or mobility). This provision ensures that the Act does not create a second or alternative avenue for complaints of disability discrimination where such complaints are properly covered by the DDA. Complaints of age discrimination that would also be covered by the DDA should be dealt with under the legislative regime established by that Act.³⁶

It can be noted, however, that this section will not necessarily prevent a person from bringing a claim of both age and disability discrimination. The Explanatory Memorandum to the ADA states:

[T]his Bill is not designed to limit a person's rights if they are the subject of discrimination. If particular circumstances or actions result in a person being discriminated against both on the ground of age (in a way that is not related to disability) and also on the ground of disability, then the person may still initiate a complaint about unlawful discrimination on the grounds of age and disability.³⁷

This would seem to contemplate a person bringing a complaint about distinct (although possibly related) acts, some of which are attributable to age discrimination alone, others which are attributable to disability discrimination.

2.2.6 Discrimination against a relative or associate on the basis of age

Unlike the DDA³⁸ and RDA,³⁹ the ADA does not prohibit discrimination on the basis of the age of a person's relative or associate.

2.3 Proscribed areas of Age Discrimination

The areas of public life in which age discrimination is proscribed are set out in Part 4, Divisions 1-3. In general they reflect those proscribed in other federal unlawful discrimination legislation. Each of these areas is considered in turn.

36 See Revised Explanatory Memorandum, Age Discrimination Bill 2003 (Cth), 38. The operation of this provision is unlikely to disadvantage applicants as establishing disability discrimination might be expected to be easier than establishing age discrimination. This is because the DDA does not require an applicant to prove that disability was the dominant reason for the doing of an act (s 16 ADA, discussed at 2.2.4 above), only that it was one of the reasons (see s 10 DDA).

37 Ibid 39.

38 See ss 15-29 of the DDA.

39 See ss 11-14 of the RDA.

2.3.1 Discrimination in employment and occupation

(a) Scope of the prohibition

The prohibition on age discrimination in employment extends to:

- Discrimination against employees,⁴⁰ commission agents⁴¹ and contract workers.⁴² It is unlawful to discriminate in recruitment and offers of employment, as well as the actual terms and conditions of employment, access to promotion and training and dismissal or any other detriment. These provisions do not extend, however, to voluntary work or domestic duties performed in private households,⁴³ and provide an exception where a person cannot perform the inherent requirements of the particular position because of their age.⁴⁴
- Partnerships consisting of more than six partners. It is unlawful to discriminate in relation to decisions about who can become a partner, and the terms and conditions upon which a partnership is offered. This provision also covers denying or limiting access to benefits, expelling a partner or subjecting a partner to any other detriment.⁴⁵ It is an exemption to this provision where a person cannot perform the inherent requirements of the partnership because of their age.⁴⁶
- Qualifying bodies which provide authorisations or qualifications needed for carrying on an occupation, profession or trade. It is unlawful to discriminate in the conferring or withdrawing of such authorisation or qualification, and in the terms or conditions on which an authorisation or qualification is granted.⁴⁷ It is an exception to this provision where a person cannot perform the inherent requirements of the particular profession or occupation because of their age.⁴⁸
- Registered organisations under Schedule 1B to the Workplace Relations Act 1996 (Cth). It is unlawful to discriminate by refusing membership to the organisation, in the terms and conditions on which an organisation is prepared to admit a member or in the access to benefits provided by the organisation.⁴⁹

40 Section 18.

41 Section 19.

42 Section 20.

43 Section 18(3).

44 Sections 18(4), 19(3) and 20(2) respectively.

45 Section 21.

46 Section 21(4).

47 Section 22.

48 Section 22(2).

49 Section 23.

- Employment agencies. It is unlawful to discriminate by refusing to provide services or in the terms or conditions or manner in which their services are provided,⁵⁰ unless the person cannot carry out the inherent requirements of the particular employment because of their age.⁵¹

(b) 'Inherent requirements' exemption

As noted above in relation to the particular aspects of employment that are covered by the prohibition of age discrimination, such discrimination will not be unlawful where a person is unable to carry out the inherent requirements of the particular position or employment because of their age.

In determining whether a person is unable to carry out the inherent requirements of a particular position or employment, the following factors must be taken into account:

- the person's past training, qualifications and experience relevant to the particular employment;
- if the person is already employed by the employer – the person's performance as an employee; and
- all other relevant factors that it is reasonable to take into account.⁵²

In relation to similar provisions in the DDA⁵³ and the then Industrial Relations Act 1988 (Cth),⁵⁴ the High Court has held that the 'inherent requirements' of a particular employment means 'something essential' to, or an 'essential element' of, a particular position.⁵⁵ The question of whether something is an inherent requirement of a particular position is required to be answered with reference to the function which the employee performs as part of the employer's undertaking and by reference to that organisation.⁵⁶ However employers are not permitted to organise or define their business to permit discriminatory conduct.⁵⁷

50 Section 24.

51 Section 24(2).

52 Section 18(5). Similar tests are provided for in the areas of discrimination against commission agents (s 19(4)), contract workers (s 20(3)), partnerships (s 21(5)).

53 See section 15(4) of the DDA. This section and cases which have considered it in detail are discussed at 5.3.1(d).

54 See now ss 170CK(3) and 170LU(6)(b) of the Workplace Relations Act 1996 (Cth).

55 Qantas Airways Limited v Christie (1998) 193 CLR 280, 294 [34] (Gaudron J with whom Brennan CJ agreed on this point), 305 [74] (McHugh J), 318 [114] (Gummow J); X v Commonwealth (1999) 200 CLR 177.

56 Qantas Airways Limited v Christie (1998) 193 CLR 280, 284 [1] (Brennan CJ).

57 X v Commonwealth (1999) 200 CLR 177, 189-90 [37] (McHugh J); 208 [102] (Gummow and Hayne JJ (with whom Gleeson CJ and Callinan J agreed)).

2.3.2 Discrimination in areas of public life other than employment

The ADA also makes age discrimination unlawful in the following areas:

(a) Access to goods, services and facilities⁵⁸

This provision makes it unlawful for someone who provides goods, services⁵⁹ and facilities to discriminate against a person on the basis of age by refusing to provide the goods, services or facilities, in the terms or conditions on which those goods, services or facilities are offered, or in the manner in which they are offered.

(b) Education⁶⁰

This provision makes it unlawful for an educational authority to discriminate against a person on the basis of age in refusing or failing to accept the person's application for admission, or in the terms and conditions on which the authority is prepared to accept the application. It also makes it unlawful to deny or limit access to benefits provided by the educational institution, to expel a student or subject a student to any other detriment on the basis of their age.

However this provision provides an exception where an educational institution is established for persons of particular ages (for example, primary or high schools).⁶¹

(c) Accommodation⁶²

This provision makes it unlawful to discriminate against a person on the basis of their age by refusing an application for accommodation,⁶³ in the terms and conditions on which accommodation is offered or giving a person a lower priority in an accommodation waiting list. This provision also makes it unlawful to deny or limit access to benefits associated with accommodation or to evict the person or subject the person to any other detriment on the basis of their age.

However this provision provides an exception where accommodation is provided by a person who lives on the premises or whose near relative lives on the premises, where the accommodation is offered to three or less persons.⁶⁴

58 Section 28.

59 Note that s 5 defines 'services' widely to include superannuation, banking, insurance, grants, loans, credit or finance, travel, recreation or refreshment, telecommunications, services provided by a professional or tradesperson or services provided by a government, government authority or local government body.

60 Section 26.

61 Section 26(3).

62 Section 29.

63 Note that accommodation is defined to include residential or business accommodation: s 29(4).

64 Section 29(3). The term 'near relative' is defined in s 29(4).

(d) Access to premises⁶⁵

This provision makes it unlawful to discriminate against a person on the basis of age in allowing or refusing access to premises⁶⁶ that the public or a section of the public is entitled to enter or use, or on the terms and conditions on which such access is permitted.

(e) Land⁶⁷

This provision makes it unlawful to discriminate against a person on the basis of age in relation to the selling of, or other dealings in land. This includes refusing to sell land or applying discriminatory terms and conditions on which an interest in land is offered.

However this provision contains an exception in relation to the giving of land in a will or as a gift.

(f) Requests for information on which unlawful age discrimination might be based⁶⁸

This provision makes it unlawful to ask a person to provide information if the information is being requested in connection with or for the purposes of doing an act which would be unlawful under the ADA, and persons of a different age would not be asked to provide that information in situations which are the same or not materially different.

(g) Administration of Commonwealth laws and programs⁶⁹

This provision makes it unlawful for a person who performs functions or exercises powers under Commonwealth laws or under Commonwealth programs or has any other responsibility for the administration of those programs or laws, to discriminate against a person on the basis of age in the exercise of those powers or responsibilities.

65 Section 27.

66 Premises is defined in s 5 of the ADA to include structures (such as buildings, aircraft, vehicles or vessels), places and parts of premises.

67 Section 30.

68 Section 32.

69 Section 31.

2.4 Ancillary Liability

The ADA provides for liability for an unlawful act where a person 'causes, instructs, induces, aids or permits another person' to do that act.⁷⁰ The approach to this section is likely to be assisted by consideration given to analogous provisions in the SDA⁷¹ and DDA.⁷²

The ADA also makes employers vicariously liable for age discrimination by employees, unless they can establish that they took reasonable precautions and exercised due diligence in order to avoid such discrimination.⁷³

2.5 General exemptions under the ADA

In addition to the exemptions provided in relation to specific provisions of the ADA (outlined above), the ADA contains a number of general exemptions.⁷⁴

2.5.1 'Positive discrimination'

The ADA provides an exemption allowing positive measures to be taken (or 'positive discrimination') on the basis of age, as follows:

33 Positive Discrimination

This Part does not make it unlawful for a person to discriminate against another person, on the ground of the other person's age, by an act that is consistent with the purposes of this Act, if:

- (a) the act provides a bona fide benefit to a person of a particular age; or
Example: This paragraph would cover a hairdresser giving a discount to a person holding a Seniors Card or a similar card, because giving the discount is an act that provides a bona fide benefit to older persons.
- (b) the act is intended to meet a need that arises out of the age of the persons of a particular age; or
Example: Young people often have a greater need for welfare services (including information, support and referral) than other people. This paragraph would therefore cover the provision of welfare services to young homeless people, because such services are intended to meet a need arising out of the age of such people.

70 Section 56.

71 See Elliott v Nanda (2001) 111 FCR 240, 292-93 [163], 294-295 [169] in relation to the meaning of 'permit' in the context of s 105 of the SDA, discussed at 4.9.

72 See Cooper v Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission (1999) 93 FCR 481, 490 [27], 493-496 [37] – [41], in relation to s 122 of the DDA, discussed at 5.4.2.

73 Section 57. Section 123(2) of the DDA is in the same terms. See also ss 18A and 18E of the RDA and s 106 of the SDA (see 4.8).

74 HREOC's concerns about a number of the exemptions contained in the ADA, amongst other things, were raised in its submissions to the Senate Legal and Constitutional Committee on the Age Discrimination Bill 2003: see www.humanrights.gov.au/legal/submissions/age_discrimination.html.

- (c) the act is intended to reduce a disadvantage experienced by persons of a particular age.

Example: Older people are often more disadvantaged by retrenchment than other people. This paragraph would therefore cover the provision of additional notice entitlements for older workers, because such entitlements are intended to reduce a disadvantage experienced by older people.

This section is said to recognise that there are some circumstances in which age based distinctions are legitimate or justified by other strong policy interests.⁷⁵ The Explanatory Memorandum to the ADA explains the intention of this provision as follows:

- (a) [s 33(a)] recognises and permits a range of concessions and benefits that are provided in good faith to people of a particular age. The most common examples are discounts and concessions provided to older people. Such benefits are not seeking to give older people an unfair advantage or to exclude or disadvantage people of other ages, and have broad social acceptance.
- (b) [s 33(b)] recognises and permits measures that seek to address the needs of people of particular ages that are different to or more acute than the needs of other ages ... While this provision refers to the beneficial act in question being 'intended' to meet an age-related need, it is not necessary to establish that the person actually doing the particular act has a certain intention at the time ... [T]he provision is also directed at situations where a beneficial program or facility is established by a person or body with the intention of meeting an age-related need, but is operated by another person or body who simply carries out the policies determined by those who established the beneficial program.
- (c) [s 33(c)] recognises and permits measures that seek to overcome age-related disadvantage. Where a particular age group has been historically disadvantaged, or where social circumstances at the time are such that a particular age group has less access to certain social benefits or opportunities, measures that are aimed at alleviating these problems are allowed ... As with the needs-based exemption, the requisite intention to reduce disadvantage need not be held by the person actually providing the beneficial treatment.

The concept of positive discrimination embodied in this section of the ADA extends beyond the current understanding of 'special measures' in other federal unlawful discrimination laws. Under the SDA,⁷⁶ RDA⁷⁷ and DDA,⁷⁸ special measures are essentially confined to those actions taken in order to achieve substantive equality, or to meet the special needs of a particular group. Under the SDA and RDA, the taking of special measures ceases to be authorised once the purpose for which 75 See Revised Explanatory Memorandum, Age Discrimination Bill 2003 (Cth), 50.

76 See s 7D of the SDA.

77 See s 8 of the RDA.

78 See s 45 of the DDA.

Federal Discrimination Law 2005

they were implemented has been achieved.⁷⁹ The DDA limits special measures to those 'reasonably intended' to address a special need or disadvantage.⁸⁰

Section 33 of the ADA is broader in its scope than the 'special measures' provisions found in the SDA, RDA and DDA because it authorises positive measures to be taken for purposes other than achieving substantive equality or meeting special needs. It extends to any 'bona fide benefit' (an expression which is not defined). Section 33 of the ADA also does not contain any temporal limitation such that the measure is no longer protected once its purposes have been achieved, although this may be implicit in ss 33(b) and (c) which require reference to be made to an existing need or disadvantage.

2.5.2 Exemption for youth wages

The ADA contains an exemption for youth wages as follows:

25 Exemption for youth wages

This Division does not make it unlawful for a person to discriminate against another person on the ground of the other person's age, in relation to youth wages:

- (a) in the arrangements made for the purpose of determining who should be offered work; or
- (b) in determining who should be offered work; or
- (c) in payment, or offer of payment, of remuneration for work.

In this section:

youth wages means remuneration for persons who are under 21.

The Explanatory Memorandum to the ADA states:

Youth wages are a well-recognised feature of workforce relations in Australia. This exemption will protect the competitive position of young people in the workforce by allowing employers and the like to continue to recruit and employ young people and remunerate them on the basis of an appropriate youth wage.⁸¹

2.5.3 Exemption relating to superannuation, insurance and credit

The ADA provides an exemption in relation to age-based discrimination in the terms and conditions on which an annuity, insurance policy or membership of a superannuation scheme is offered or refused, where the discrimination:

- is based upon actuarial or statistical data on which it is reasonable for the discriminator to rely; and
- is reasonable having regard to the matter of the data and other relevant factors; or

79 See s 7D(4) of the SDA; Article 1(4) of the International Convention for the Elimination of all Form of Racial Discrimination, to which s 8(1) of the RDA refers and Gerhardy v Brown (1985) 159 CLR 70, 139-40.

80 See s 45 of the DDA.

81 Revised Explanatory Memorandum, Age Discrimination Bill 2003 (Cth), 47.

- in a case where no such actuarial or statistic data is available, and cannot reasonably be obtained – the discrimination is reasonable having regard to any other relevant factors.⁸²

This exemption is in the same terms as that contained in s 46 of the DDA. The application of that provision of the DDA and the meaning to be given to the expression 'reasonable' therein, was considered in QBE Travel Insurance v Bassanelli.⁸³

The ADA also provides an exemption for age-based discrimination in the terms and conditions on which credit is provided to a person where the discrimination:

- is based upon actuarial or statistical data on which it is reasonable for the discriminator to rely; and
- is reasonable having regard to the matter of the data.⁸⁴

Section 54 of the ADA provides for HREOC and its President to have the power to require the production of actuarial or statistical data where a person has acted in a way that would, apart from the above exemptions, be unlawful. It is an offence not to provide the source of any such actuarial or statistical data if required to do so.⁸⁵

The ADA also provides an exemption in relation to anything done in direct compliance with Commonwealth legislation (and regulations or instruments made under such legislation) which relates to superannuation and for certain public sector insurance schemes.⁸⁶

2.5.4 Exemption for charities, religious and voluntary bodies

Similar to the exemptions contained in the SDA⁸⁷ and DDA,⁸⁸ the ADA provides for exemptions for charities, religious and voluntary bodies.

The exemption for 'charities' is by way of an exemption for provisions in charitable instruments that '[confer] charitable benefits, or enables charitable benefits to be conferred, wholly or in part on persons of a particular age' and 'any act done to give effect to such a provision'.⁸⁹

An act or practice of 'a body established for religious purposes' that 'conforms to the doctrine, tenets or beliefs of that religion' or 'is necessary to avoid injury to the religious sensitivities of adherents of that religion' is also exempt from the ADA.⁹⁰

82 Section 37(1),(2),(3).

83 [2004] FCA 396, see discussion at 5.5.2.

84 Section 37(4),(5).

85 Sections 52, 54. Similar provisions exist under the DDA: see s 107.

86 Section 38.

87 See ss 36 (Charities), 37 (Religious bodies), 39 (Voluntary bodies) of the SDA.

88 See s 49 (Charities) of the DDA.

89 Section 34.

90 Section 35.

Federal Discrimination Law 2005

In relation to voluntary bodies, the ADA provides as follows:

36 Voluntary bodies

This part does not make it unlawful for a voluntary body to discriminate against a person, on the ground of the person's age, in connection with:

- (a) the admission of persons as members of the body; or
- (b) the provision of benefits, facilities or services to members of the body.

In this section:

registered organisation means an organisation within the meaning of Schedule 1B of the Workplace Relations Act 1996.

voluntary body means an association or other body (whether incorporated or unincorporated) the activities of which are not engaged in for the purposes of making a profit, but does not include:

- (a) a registered organisation; or
- (b) a body established by a law of the Commonwealth, of a State or of a Territory; or
- (c) an association that provides grants, loans, credit, or finance to its members.

The Explanatory Memorandum states, in relation to section 36:

This clause provides an exemption for age discrimination by voluntary bodies, where the discrimination relates to admission to membership of the voluntary body or the provision of benefits, facilities or services to members of the body. The exemption does not extend to other possible acts of discrimination by voluntary bodies, such as in employment or in the provision of services to the public.⁹¹

2.5.5 Exemption in relation to health

The ADA provides an exemption in relation to:

- Exempted health programs, which are defined as:

a program, scheme or arrangement that:

- (a) relates to health goods or services or medical goods or services; and
- (b) is reasonably based on evidence about matters (including safety, effectiveness, risks, benefits and health needs) that affect people of a particular age in a different way to people of a different age.

The evidence mentioned in paragraph (b) is the evidence that was reasonably available at the time the program, scheme or arrangement was established.⁹²

91 See Revised Explanatory Memorandum, Age Discrimination Bill 2003 (Cth), 51. In the context of the similarly-worded provisions of the SDA, it has been held that the exemption provides protection to voluntary bodies only in their relationships with their members, not in their relationships with non-members: see Gardner v All Australian Netball Association Ltd (2003) 197 ALR 28, and the discussion at 4.7.2.

92 Section 42(1),(2).

An example of such a program might be a scheme that provides free influenza vaccines to older people, on the basis of evidence showing that older people are at greater risk of complications as a result of influenza than are people of other ages.⁹³

- Decisions taken by health or medical providers in relation to the provision of health or medical goods or services (including anything done in compliance with an exempted health program). This provision provides that it will not be discriminatory to take a person's age into account in determining whether or not to provide that person with particular health or medical services or goods, where that determination is reasonably based on evidence and professional knowledge about the ability of persons of that age to benefit from those goods or services.⁹⁴

2.5.6 Exemption relating to direct compliance with laws, orders of courts including taxation legislation and social security legislation

The ADA also provides an exemption in relation to acts done in direct compliance with certain federal and State and Territory laws, court orders and industrial awards and agreements. The section creates two classes of exemption. A general exemption is given in relation to acts done in direct compliance with those acts or subsidiary legislative instruments contained in Schedule 1 to the ADA.⁹⁵ However a two year exemption is provided in relation to acts done in direct compliance with other Commonwealth acts and subsidiary instruments.⁹⁶

An exemption is also provided in relation to acts done in direct compliance with:

- acts or legislative instruments of a State or Territory,⁹⁷ unless it is an instrument specified in regulations made under the ADA;⁹⁸ and
- a court order,⁹⁹ an order or award of an industrial relations tribunal,¹⁰⁰ a certified agreement¹⁰¹ or an Australian workplace agreement¹⁰² within the meaning of the Workplace Relations Act 1996 (Cth).

93 See note to s 42(1) of the ADA.

94 Section 42(3).

95 Section 39(1).

96 Section 39(2).

97 Section 39(4).

98 Section 39(5).

99 Section 39(7).

100 Section 39(8)(a).

101 Section 39(8)(b).

102 Section 39(8)(c).

Federal Discrimination Law 2005

The ADA also provides an exemption in relation to anything done by a person in direct compliance with a taxation law (within the meaning of the Income Tax Assessment Act 1997 (Cth)),¹⁰³ and various pieces of social security legislation and subsidiary instruments, including the Community Development Employment Projects Scheme (within the meaning of the Social Security Act 1991 (Cth)).¹⁰⁴

2.5.7 Exemption in relation to migration and citizenship

The ADA provides an exemption for anything done:

- in relation to the administration of the Migration Act 1958 (Cth) or the Immigration (Guardianship of Children) Act 1946 (Cth) or subsidiary instruments;¹⁰⁵ or
- in direct compliance with the Australian Citizenship Act 1948 (Cth) or the Immigration (Education) Act 1971 (Cth).¹⁰⁶

The exemption in relation to the administration of the Migration Act 1958 (Cth) or the Immigration (Guardianship of Children) Act 1946 (Cth) or subsidiary instruments is a potentially broad exemption as it appears to exempt discretionary acts not mandated by those laws or subsidiary instruments.

103 Section 40.

104 Section 41.

105 Section 43(1). A similarly worded exemption is contained in s 52 of the DDA.

106 Section 43(2).